Good Character

There are great rewards for having good character and severe warnings for abandoning it: Defense. Whoever defends a brother (Muslim) who is being reviled, Allah will defend him and aid him in this world and the hereafter. Whoever refrains from defending a Muslim who is being reviled while having the ability to defend, Allah will apprehend him in this world and the hereafter. (Sharhus Sunnah)
Faults. Whoever observes a fault of another and conceals that fault (not advertising it), is (in reward) like one who has saved the life of a girl who was being buried alive. (Ahmad) Hunger. He is not a perfect Muslim who eats while his neighbor remains hungry. (Baihaqi) Needs. He who fulfills a need of a person in order to give him pleasure, has given me (the Prophet sallallahu alaihi wa sallam) pleasure; whoever has given me pleasure has given Allah pleasure; whoever has given pleasure to Allah, He will give him Paradise. (Baihaqi) Difficulty. Seventy three acts of pardon are recorded for a person who aids a man in difficulty. Of these (73 pardons) one is sufficient for the rectification of all his affairs. The other 72 will serve as means for the acquisition of lofty stages in the hereafter. (Baihaqi) Visiting Sick. Whenever a Muslim visits a sick brother (Muslim) or merely goes to meet a brother, then Allah says: ‘You are holy, your walking is holy, you have arranged your abode in Paradise.’ (Tirmizi) Hayaatul Muslimeen, pg 89-91
